

I got falsely accused and now feel betrayed and abandoned

---

(Posted "as is" by the original poster)

This all happened yesterday and the wound is still pretty fresh.. me and my gf haven't been together for very long, but something in us just clicked so well for us. We would talk about all our future hopes and dreams and how the other was included in all of it. she's originally from out of state but goes to school near me and left for winter break well we had this extravagant weekend planned hotels booked, tickets bought, presents for each other since we weren't together for Christmas and we were supposed to have such a good time.

We were talking before she took off for her flight and she told me she loved me and that she would text once she landed. A couple of hours go by and I wanted to check up on her just to find out she's blocked me on everything and I instantly go into panic mode trying to reach out to her every which way and text her through a texting app asking her how she could do this to me then she replies telling me I'm a monster and a horrible human being at this point I'm beyond confused and after pleading with her to tell me what I've done she tells me that she was talking to her brothers girlfriend about me and that she went to the same high school as me and that I had sexual assault allegations against me and that we were done and she can't believe that she almost fell for someone like me.

Now this is news to me because never have I once heard any sort of thing about me and especially having a younger sibling that went to the same high school don't you think they would've heard it as well? I pleaded and begged her to listen to my side but she refused me and told me that she didn't care anymore and told me goodbye and to delete everything I had of her.

Now at this point I'm super distraught not only did the person I love see me in such a light but now I have to worry about some alleged allegation against me? At this point she had blocked the app number so I just resorted to email just begging for any more information I can get on the alleged allegation but she had none no other information like any name or specifics so I just tell her how fishy everything sounds but she just kept resorting to "why did she know so much about you" "why would anyone lie about something so vile" at this point I've been trying to get her on a call for hours but I guess my last heartfelt email did it for her since she called me pretty immediately after. I try pleading my case to her but she wouldn't budge. So in my defeat I just asked her through all of our time knowing my character if she thinks I could do something like that and she said no but she didn't know what to believe and I agree it must've been so scary for her but I can't just dismiss my own feelings so I try to think about every scenario that would put me in this place and I started asking about her brothers gf and how she heard said rumors. Well no answer and then she asked me if I knew anyone by her name and I honestly didn't but she mentioned she graduated 2 years before me which is weird because I only went to said high school my last year.

Now my mind raced back to about over a year ago how I matched with some girl on tinder but couldn't remember her name so she asked me to describe her. everything I said checked a tick mark about her brothers gf every description to the tee well I had originally setup a date with her but we fell out of contact and she just unadded me so whatever but fast forward a few months she likes me on hinge and sent a pretty ironic message especially because she was the one that unadded me so I took a screenshot of it. Now I'm really lazy when it comes to deleting screenshots and when I got a new phone I just backed all my pictures into my computer so I start digging through thousands of pictures to see if I still had a screenshot and to my luck I did and it ends up being her what a miracle

I forgot to mention her brother and his gf have been dating for 3 years and he had suspected her of cheating but had no proof. now when I matched with her this was in the span of the last year and a half so now we figure out that she had said all this so that she wouldn't get recognized by me and have been caught cheating well once my gf showed her brother and her the proof she admitted to everything. the joy of that victory did not last long and now was left feeling devastated and abandoned by my gf.. how she was so easily swayed into believing something like that about me and she immediately thought I was a monster and went on to block me on everything before even giving me a chance to explain myself. I told her this and she started sobbing asking me not to go but wasn't she the one that pushed me away? I don't think I can get over that feeling of loneliness and abandonment she caused me and I really don't know what to do.

TLDR; gf blocks me on everything because her brothers gf said I had sexual assault allegations just so we would never meet to cover her own infidelity and gf wouldn't give me the chance to explain myself but once I had proof she became apologetic but now I can't shake that feeling of abandonment from her.

Captured from:

https://www.reddit.com/r/TrueOffMyChest/comments/10cm8dt/i\_got\_falsely\_accused\_and\_now\_feel\_betrayed\_and/

Posted by u/xCaffe [January 15, 2023 | 11:16:17 UTC +8]